Quarter 4 2018

OBJECTIVES

PORTFOLIO OBJECTIVE

The Waverton Balanced Portfolio is intended for investors with a medium attitude to risk and a minimum time horizon of 6 years. The portfolio seeks a longer-term return of 3.0% above inflation measured by the Consumer Price Index (CPI).

PORTFOLIO TYPE	INDICATIVE RETURN: CPI+	Expected Risk
Growth	3.5%	High
Balanced	3.0%	Medium
Cautious	2.5%	Low
Defensive	2.0%
Conservative	1.5%

PORTFOLIO OVERVIEW

The portfolio seeks to provide a diversified interest in a variety of asset classes and the realistic prospect of capital growth and income over the longer term within acceptable risk parameters. Importantly, we expect little correlation between equities, bonds and selected alternative asset classes so the portfolio should provide some degree of protection during periods of equity market weakness.

The portfolio is invested through a mix of four specialist Waverton funds: Sterling Bond Fund, Global Core Equity Fund, Tactical Equity Fund and the Alternatives Fund.

COMMENTARY

All readers will be painfully aware that global equity markets have fallen significantly since the end of September. An initial sell-off in October was followed by a rise in markets in November, but it was one of the toughest Decembers on record as markets were hit hard by a combination of a slowing world economy, less support from central banks and worries over the global trade.

Government bond markets rose during the quarter as equity markets and other risk assets sold off sharply. We posted a positive performance from our Fixed Income component in the quarter thanks largely to a very strong December which in turn was due to some defensive moves within the Fund during the year, including: reduction of currency risk and credit exposure, an increase in duration and the introduction of derivative based protection strategies. Our use of options will enable us to reverse this when we judge the cycle is changing and the bear market in Gilts resumes.

Within equity markets there was more dispersion amongst sectors than regions. The Technology sector fell -15.7% in sterling terms, as many growth businesses came under pressure, including some of the largest companies like Apple (-28% during Q4) and Nvidia (-51%). Many of these have performed strongly for some time, and even after a weak Q4 the Technology sector still posted positive returns in sterling over 2018 as a whole. Technology was not the worst performing sector in Q4; the Energy sector fell -19.7%. Oil price (Brent) collapsed from $83 a barrel to $54 during the period, which put pressure on oil companies many of which have low returns on capital and high debt levels. The only sector to post positive returns was Utilities (+3.0%), although other sectors with defensive cash flows like Telecoms and Consumer Staples were relatively resilient.

The Core portfolio outperformed on a relative basis during Q4 (and for 2018 as a whole) as valuation discipline and exposure to companies with relatively strong balance sheets supported stock selection performance. The Tactical component underperformed the Index in the fourth quarter. Unsurprisingly in these conditions the chief laggards were those funds that were exposed to the small and micro-cap strategies in the UK, US and Japan. There was little change to the geographic allocation over the quarter, but we did purchase a new holding, the closed ended investment trust BB Healthcare, in December.

Alternatives also had a challenging fourth quarter with the absolute return strategies caught out by the sharp reversal in equity markets in October. Seven of our ten Managers posted negative returns. It was interesting to note however that these managers, in aggregate managed to protect in December and posted a small positive so were clearly relatively nimble in the fast markets that we have seen.

The falls that we have seen in the quarter have raised fears that the stock market is expecting a sharp slowdown or even recession in the United States in particular. However, the reliable cyclical indicators we constantly monitor are not consistent with a recession. For example, whereas corporate profits have declined ahead of 10 out of the last 11 recessions, company results for the third quarter of this year showed continued growth with widespread confidence that there will be further progress in 2019. Also, the oil price has risen significantly ahead of all recessions since 1970; in contrast, oil prices have declined over 35% in the last two months. That is a positive for the economy, not a negative. This stock market correction that we are seeing means that valuations are now more attractive with the prospective price earnings multiple on the world index at a hardly elevated 13x. We have high degree of conviction that the companies you are exposed to in your portfolio will continue to grow their future earnings and cash flow, and that their business models are robust; this will in turn provide shareholders with good returns over time.
