COMMENTARY

During September the fund (Class A USD) rose 0.02% while the benchmark (JPM 1 month USD Cash) rose 0.15% and the JPM Broad Global Bond Index fell 1.05%.

Global bonds (priced in US Dollars) lost value from both duration and currency during the month as bond yields rose by 9bp and the US Dollar appreciated. The Federal Reserve increased interest rates by another 0.25% as expected and the underlying strength of the US economy has caused a number of observers to push out their expectations for the timing of the next slowdown. This is putting upward pressure on US Treasury yields.

The fund remains very conservatively positioned in terms of duration (less than 1 year) and has a far superior carry (close to 5% p.a.) which helped it to preserve capital. We continue to think that if we can collect income and preserve capital, it will represent a significant outperformance of global indices and passive bond investors.

2018 has been a more difficult year for the fund in credit with some weakness in financials but this looks to be improving (higher interest rates will help) and the underlying fundamentals remain solid.
